General Books. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 22 pages. Dimensions: 9.7in. x 7.4in. x 0.1in. This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1830. Excerpt: . . . INTRODUCTION. IT is required that the Learner, before his entrance on the following Exercises, be acquainted with those rules of Concord and Government which are of most frequent occurrence; but not that he be familiar with those less usual constructions which may, at least for the present, be regarded rather as Exceptions to the general structure of the language, than as constituting foundations for Primary Rules. Most of those which are necessary may be selected from almost any grammar or book of exercises. They are all stated clearly, concisely, and in English, in the Charterhouse Grammar. If he understands the examples set forth in that Introduction, his progress has been sufficient to qualify him for commencing these exercises. Before we proceed to the main topic of the Title-page, it will be proper to endeavor to gain the power of discriminating in some cases which are...
